Waseem Bhatti, MD

Dr. Waseem Bhatti is medical director of Interventional Radiology at Summit Health, which combines the most advanced imaging technology with cutting-edge, minimally invasive procedures to provide the safest and most effective treatments for patients with cancer and other conditions in the comfort and convenience of a non-hospital setting.

Dr. Bhatti treats patients through precision image-guided biopsies, tumor ablation, and embolization. His expertise also includes uterine artery embolization, giving relief to women suffering from fibroids without surgical removal.

Summit Health utilizes the latest in high-tech imaging equipment, including on-site MRI imaging, PET/CT imaging, and nuclear medicine, enabling patients to receive a minimally invasive treatment with minimal blood loss and minimal anesthesia requirements. That technology includes a fluoroscopy unit with 3-D CT capabilities that helps pinpoint tumors and an ultrasound machine that can fuse an ultrasound image with a CAT scan or MRI image, which helps providers guide tumor ablations.

The interventional radiology team also includes Drs. Joseph DeMarco and Michael Shirazi, along with physician assistant Gina Baird. “Our team is truly compassionate and empathetic, and we want patients to feel comfortable and supported,” says Dr. Bhatti. “That’s part of Summit Health’s overall mission, and it’s our personal mission at the practice. What also sets us apart is the technology that Summit Health has invested in, offering patients seamless integrated care. Our practice is unique nationally and gives New Jersey residents access to the best technology in our specialty.”
